

Editorial

This issue of SRC is devoted to descriptions of some of Canada's most outstanding history journals and other journals oriented to an historical time period. It is by no means a complete record of all such journals. However, this special issue of Scholarly Research and Communication does provide a beginning in opening for view the backgrounds and orientations of at least some of the journals that serve Canadian researchers.

Rowland Lorimer is Professor Emeritus at Simon
Fraser University. Email:
lorimer@sfu.ca .

The inspiration for this volume came from an awareness that, while the primary role of journals is to create a record of knowledge and thereby to put current researchers in touch with their colleagues, past and present, the nature and orientations of journals themselves has, for the most part, gone unrecorded. By bringing these articles forward, the aim is at two goals: 1) to begin to create a public record of Canada's scholarly journals, and 2) to create a resource, which researchers might use in placing their research.

Rowland Lorimer, Simon Fraser University

CISP Press

Scholarly and Research Communication

Volume 9, Issue 1, Article ID 0106295, 1 page

Journal URL: www.src-online.ca <http://doi.org/10.22230/src.2018v9n1e295>

Received January 31, 2018, Accepted February 1, 2018, Published February 1, 2018

Lorimer, Rowland. (2018). Editorial. Scholarly and Research Communication, 9(1): 0106295, 1 p.

© 2018 Lorimer, Rowland. This Open Access article is distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution Non-Commercial License (<http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/2.5/ca>), which permits unrestricted non-commercial use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, provided the original work is properly cited.